Speaker's Introduction

Marci Moore and Pam Williams, co-founders of Innergized! provide customized coaching, team building, speaking and consulting programs. Since 1995, they have partnered with clients like the American Society of Association Executives, First Night International, Lutheran Family Services of Colorado and Virginia, the University of South Florida, and other local, state and national nonprofit organizations and associations. Marci and Pam have each held senior management and executive level positions in nonprofit organizations, so they know firsthand the unique challenges you face.

For many years, Marci and Pam helped rescue organizations in crisis - if an organization was in trouble, they were there. While this work was very rewarding, it was also exhausting, so they took a vote and decided to take off their capes. Today, these Chief Innergy Officers focus on helping individuals, teams and organizations create the energy they need for results that last. They combine their practical, hands-on, operating experience with a coach approach, which allows them to listen, ask the difficult questions and help you create solutions that work for you and your team.

Since most of their work is with CEOs, senior executives and their teams, Marci and Pam hone their own teamwork skills and manage their energy by riding a tandem recumbent bicycle. They consider themselves in good company, since John Kennedy once said that nothing compares to the simple pleasure of a bicycle ride and Albert Einstein is said to have thought of the theory of relativity while riding his bicycle.
